Petr Kratochvíl, Director, Institute of International Relations in Prague

Introductory Remarks:

Petr Gajdušek, State Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic

13:15 – 14:00 Key-Note Address:

Bohuslav Sobotka, Prime Minister of the Czech Republic, Office of the Government of the Czech Republic

14:00 – 15:00 Opening Plenary Session:

The EU as a Community of Rules or as a Community of Exceptions?

The EU has always stressed that rules have to be obeyed, a fact strongly underlined during the accession process of CEE countries. However, the last decade has shown that the application of these rules EU and its institutions can be very flexible. It also seems that some Member States can infringe the rules without the concerns of sanctions that have hit others. Exceptions that are planned to overcome a possible deadlock or to solve an unexpected crisis seem to sometimes fall outside of these bounds. Can the EU sustain its stability by granting more and more exceptions? Does this hamper mutual confidence within the EU and its Member States? Should the EU return to a more rigorous enforcement of rules?

Jakub Wiśniewski, Vice President of GLOBSEC & Director of the Globsec Policy Institute
Massimo D'Alema, Former Prime Minister of Italy, President of Foundation for European Progressive Studies
Jakub Dürr, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs for European Issues, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic
Péter Balázs, Professor, Central European University, former EU Commissioner & Minister of Foreign Affairs of Hungary
Chair: Eric Maurice, Editor-in-Chief, EUobserver

15:00 – 15:30 Coffee break

15:30 – 17:00 Breakout Sessions: Rules or Exceptions

Breakout Session A: External Players in Central Europe – USA, China, Russia
Apart from membership in the EU and close relations with European partners, Central European diplomacy is also marked by the involvement of powerful external players. Central European governments have traditionally sought to cultivate special bilateral partnership with the US, particularly in security cooperation. More recently, Russia and China have been gaining increasing influence and access in the region, chiefly - though not exclusively - through strategic business endeavours, or even, as in the case of Russia, through political subversion. What role do these external actors play in the domestic and foreign policies of Central European states? Is there a risk of Central Europe becoming - as it sometimes alleged - yet again a playground for great power politics?

Agatha Kratz, Associate Policy Fellow, European Council on Foreign Relations
Roland Freudenstein, Policy Director, Wilfried Martens Centre for European Studies
Maria Ordzhonikidze, Secretary General, EU-Russia Centre
Chair: Anastas Vangeli, Researcher, Graduate School for Social Research, Polish Academy of Science in Warsaw

Breakout Session B: Paris, Berlin: Still Deciding the Future of Europe?

It has become commonplace to assert that Franco-German cooperation, a traditional motor of EU politics, is stuttering. This is often attributed to the growing imbalance in their economic performance and political weight. And yet, in many areas - notably defense integration or Eurozone governance reform - agreement between Berlin and Paris remains indispensable to any meaningful progress. What will be the implications of the successive elections for Franco-German cooperation? What role will other big Member States - Italy, Spain and Poland - play in the post-Brexit configuration of power in the EU?

Barbara Lippert, Director of Research & Executive Board, Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik
Nicole Koenig, Senior research fellow and Deputy Head of Research at the Jacques Delors Institut – Berlin
Pawel Swieboda, Deputy Head, European Political Strategy Centre
Christian Lequesne, Professor, Sciences Po & Chief Editor, European Review of International Studies
Chair: Zlatko Šabič, Professor, Centre of International Relations, University of Ljubljana

17:30 – 18:30 Plenary Panel:

EU Energy Security between Business and Politics

Over the years, and in part thanks to Russia's aggressive posture, the EU has made notable progress towards greater energy security, both internal and external, especially in the framework of the Energy Union. However, national or business interests continue to stand in the way of the collective pursuit of energy security and diversification of sources, routes and suppliers. How can the situation be remedied? Does the EU need a more robust legislative framework to ensure Member States compliance with respect to energy supply contracts? What remains to be done to build a functioning internal energy market?

Filippos Proedrou, Research Fellow, University of South Wales
Peter Stračár, General Director, General Electric CEE
Beata Jaczewska, Member of the High-Level Advisory Panel to EU Research Commissioner on Decarbonisation Pathways for the EU
Václav Bartuška, Ambassador-at-Large for Energy Security, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic
Chair: Richard Cockett, Business Editor, Economist

18:30 – 20:00 Welcome Networking Reception

Welcome address: Adriana Krnáčová, Mayor of Prague

20:00 – 21:30 Night Owl Session

Session A: Pressing the Reset Button of Transatlantic Relations: What Next?

Even before the US presidential election, transatlantic relations had been adrift. The failure of TTIP, as well as the growing US frustration with European inability to step up its security and defence commitments, reflected the dilution of a common strategic purpose. The election of President Donald Trump led to predictions of an impending breakdown of the transatlantic alliance amidst mounting challenges to the liberal international order. Are these worries being born out?

Sophia Besch, Research Fellow, Centre for European Reform
Vessela Tcherneva, Senior Director for Programmes and Head of European Council on Foreign Relations, Sofia Office
Rudolf Jindrák, Director of International Department at the Office of the President of the Czech Republic
Ivan Vejvoda, Permanent Fellow, Institute for Human Sciences
Chair: Vassilis Ntousas, International Relations Policy Advisor, Foundation for European Progressive Studies

Session B: The Uncertain Future of EU-Russia Relations

Once perceived as a promising strategic partner, Russia has become EU's main strategic challenge. While the EU has managed to come together in enforcing as a sanctions regime in response to Russia's annexation of Crimea and aggression in the Donbas, it has failed to formulate a sustainable strategy for managing relations with Russia in this new, more adversarial context. Is there enough common ground in the EU for such a strategy? It is possible to unfreeze and rebalance EU-Russia relations without compromising EU's principles and commitments to Ukraine and other Eastern partners? What is the right balance between containment and engagement? What role should current US policy play in defining EU's approach to Russia?

Mark Galeotti, Senior Researcher, Institute of International Relations in Prague
Kristi Raik, Senior Research Fellow, European Union Research Programme, Finnish Institute of International Affairs
Anna-Liisa Heusala, Senior Researcher, Aleksanteri Institute
Jakub M. Godzimirski, Research Professor, Research Group on Russia, Eurasia and the Arctic, Norwegian Institute of International Affairs
Chair: Edward Lucas, Senior Editor, Economist

Day Two, 14 June 2017, Lobkowitz Palace

9:00 – 10:00 Registration

10:00 – 11:30 Plenary Panel: Future of Digital Europe

Capitalising on the digital revolution presents a key source of economic growth for the EU. Digital technologies are inspiring new business models, transforming traditional industries, facilitating creative start-ups and changing the ways we live and work. The EU needs a regulatory environment that encourages innovation and risk-based, entrepreneurial approach, while striking a balance with protections and standards. This calls for an EU regulatory environment that has to be simple and harmonised in order to reap maximal benefits. How can we best contribute to truly completing the Digital Single Market? In order to fully participate in it, EU citizens will need new skills and lifelong learning. It is crucial to think ahead now of ensuring that no one is left behind by digitalization in order to avoid the disappointment for some that globalization has caused?

Sarah Vormsby, Analyst, Think Tank EUROPA
Václav Mach, Legal and Corporate Affairs Lead, Microsoft Corporation, CEE
Ondřej Malý, Digital Agenda Coordinator, Office of the Government of the Czech Republic

Miroslav Lajčák, Minister of Foreign and European Affairs of the Slovak Republic
Chair: Ryan Heath, Senior EU Correspondent & Associate Editor, Politico Europe

15:00 – 16:00 Plenary Panel:

What Further Reforms and Add-ons for the Eurozone?

There's now a consensus across Europe that more needs to be taken to strengthen the eurozone, but there is no consensus on what to do. Does the eurozone need its own budget and its own finance minister? How might this budget be used? Does the eurozone need eurobonds? Is this a realistic goal? Should the eurozone focus on completing its existing projects? Why is the banking union not yet complete? How likely is it that member states will agree to implement the European Deposit Insurance Scheme? What role might Capital Markets Union play in strengthening the eurozone?

Aleš Chmelař, Financial Analyst, Office of the Government of the Czech Republic

Jiří Rusnok, Governor of the Czech National Bank

Martin Špolc, Head of Unit, Economic Analysis and Evaluation, European Commission

Chair: Simon Nixon, Chief European Commentator, Wall Street Journal

16:30 – 17:45 Plenary Panel:

Redefining the Terms of the European Security Narrative

The EU has made significant progress in the past year on strengthening its CSDP and to implement the strategic autonomy that the EU Global Strategy has called for. The drivers of increased cooperation seem to be on a strong path, buoyed also by Central European countries who view a strong EU as a way to protect its citizens and defend its borders. Can we expect these positive dynamics to continue, or will the dangers of “two-speed Europe” limit integration on security issues? Are we witnessing a division of labour between NATO and the EU?

Martin Michelot, Deputy Director, EUROPEUM Institute for European Policy

Petr Drulák, Ambassador of the Czech Republic in France, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic

Lina Grip, Researcher, European Security Programme, Stockholm International Peace Research Institute

Alexandre Escorcía, Deputy Director, Centre for Analysis, Forecasting and Strategy, Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs

Investing in Europe's Growth

The Investment Plan for Europe is a flagship initiative that it is intended to boost the European economy with huge investments flowing to different sectors, and that leverages the partnerships between the EU, Member States and private companies. The expectations it has raised are high. Has the Plan so far delivered on its expected results? Should the Plan be tweaked? Does it have the potential to secure sustainable growth and low unemployment in the EU?

James Watson, Director of Economics, BusinessEurope, the Confederation of European Business

Iliyana Tsanova, Deputy Managing Director, European Fund for Strategic Investments

Sebastian Płóciennik, Head of the Weimar Triangle Program, Polish

Institute of International Affairs

Olga Afanasyeva, Executive Director, Ukrainian Venture Capital and Private Equity Association

Tom Nuttall, Charlemagne columnist, Economist

10:30 – 11:00 Registration and welcome coffee

11:00 – 12:15 Plenary Panel:

Brexit. Bad or Worse?

Brexit negotiations will dominate the EU's political agenda for years to come. Its significance will go beyond setting the parameters of EU's trade and political relations with the UK. Brexit will also shape the identity of the European project itself - to the point of re-defining the very meaning of EU membership, and ways in which EU relates to European non-member states. Just as importantly, the process and outcome of Brexit will bear on the future of the single market. Is there a shared vision of future EU-UK relations that can serve as a basis for a win-win outcome of Brexit negotiations? Can a mutually acceptable agreement be reached without compromising the integrity EU's four freedoms? How will Brexit change patterns of integration in the EU, and in Europe as a whole?

Chair: Tom Nuttall, Charlemagne Columnist, Economist

12:15 – 13:30 Buffet Lunch

13:30 – 14:45 Plenary Panel:

Exploring Options for EU – UK Trade

Once the UK leaves the EU, it will become the EU's main trade partner. Without any doubt, it is in the interest of both parties to preserve intensive mutual trade relations. To what extent will this be possible? What is the price the UK will have to pay for access to the EU internal market? What sort of trade agreement will the UK have with the EU? Will it also cover services, particularly financial services? Will there be a trade-off between the scope and speed? What sectors will be most affected by the Brexit?
